In the Chicago office, the original LPI data showed self scores ranked the highest and the direct report scores ranked the lowest. I would argue it is as much borne out Teapot Book Folding Pattern resentment as lust: the show has done a good job in just two episodes of showing us that, while David is very good at his job, he is not an automaton; it was clear that Craddock Pippa Haywood and Sampson Gina McKee telling him to spy on Julia irritated him and impinged on his moral code. Amuse myself at liberty.
