The success of Shaun of the Dead led to more successful zombie comedies during the late s to early s, such as Zombieland and Cockneys vs Zombies At the same time, starting from the mids, a new type of zombie film has been growing in popularity: the one in which zombies are portrayed as human-like in appearance and behavior, retaining the personality traits they had in life, and becoming friends or even romantic partners for humans rather than a threat for humanity. I love stories told by the supposedly innocent bystander; the less charismatic best friend; the hapless fan or scholar whose own life recedes in the shadow of their subject of adoration.
